

Case Study: Content Helps Credit Sesame Gain Millions of New Members

Credit Sesame is a financial wellness company that gives a complete picture of a consumer's credit and loans in one place, at no cost. The company provides information, education, and credit monitoring services. Members get free access to their credit score and related resources, as well as personalized suggestions for potentially money-saving financial products (a credit card with a lower interest rate, for example). Credit Sesame's proprietary algorithms analyze the consumer's finances and use bank-level analytics to make predictions about the likelihood of approval for a given credit product.

Membership is free. Premium membership is available but does not represent Credit Sesame's primary revenue stream. Long-term, growth-sustaining revenue comes from the commissions paid by creditors when members click through to apply, and are eventually approved, for new credit products.

The challenge: grow the membership base

Since a certain percentage of members will explore credit options on the site and apply for recommended products, the greater the membership base, the greater the potential for earning commissions. The greater the potential, then, for long-term profitability.

To increase the number of commission-earning opportunities, Credit Sesame needed to grow its membership base exponentially.

The process: build content to build trust

In any industry, ad dollars are wasted without expertise and authority. Credit Sesame needed to build a foundation of trust by delivering accurate, accessible content across a range of relevant topics. The first order of business was to make a great impression on visitors.

An Army of Writers founder Kim Rotter was brought on board to identify several key content verticals that would help the company organically capture the right kind of traffic and keep the reader on the page.

To develop a content library within these verticals, An Army of Writers engaged contributors who could establish industry expertise for the company. These included top-level writers with personal finance and consumer credit expertise as well as industry insiders with name recognition and established fan bases.

One of the most critical elements of the strategy was to put an editorial and fact-checking team in place to ensure that no misinformation was delivered to the consumer, nor any messaging that would put affiliate relationships at risk. To lose credibility or partnerships would have been disastrous.

The team produced daily blog posts, detailed educational guides, social media microcontent, custom imagery, infographics, and downloadable booklets and worksheets for consumers actively seeking to improve their credit or reach a financial milestone.

The result: membership grew by the millions

Between 2013 and 2018 Credit Sesame:

- Leveraged its content library in a variety of campaigns, including landing pages and paid ads, that resulted in significant new member acquisition
- Grew its membership base to more than ten million members
- Became a major player in the U.S. consumer credit industry
- Established firm footing on all of its social channels

Credit Sesame is now a highly trusted source of information and a top-ranking competitor in the consumer credit and personal finance space. Traffic peaked in early 2018, after which the content strategy was put on hold.

All countries ▼

Organic traffic: 350,824 /month

All time | One year | Last 30 days

Credit Sesame engineers continue to refine its proprietary algorithm to match members up with appropriate and beneficial financial products, leading to ongoing income-earning opportunities and financial success for the company.